

Theresa McGeady named manager of Dayton Department of Water Environmental Management Division

Release date: Tuesday, Aug. 6, 2024

City Manager Shelley Dickstein announces the appointment of Theresa McGeady as manager of the Dayton Department of Water Environmental Management Division, effective Aug. 5.

As division manager, McGeady will oversee the Stormwater Management Program, the award-winning, multi-jurisdictional Source Water Protection Program, environmental sampling, environmental emergency response, and community education/outreach for regulatory compliance. The division has nine staff members.

McGeady joined the Department of Water in 2018 as an environmental scientist and has also worked at YSI (marketing communications specialist) and the Miami Conservancy District (environmental compliance and sustainability coordinator). She earned a B.S. in Environmental Science at Wright State University (2002).

"Theresa has demonstrated skill in managing both the technical and community relations aspects of our work," said Department of Water Director Michael Powell. "We look forward to her ongoing contributions to our success and excellent service to customers."
