The City of Dayton is updating its comprehensive vision and strategies for sustainability and is seeking community input to help create a successful plan.

The community is invited to an open house on Tuesday, March 13, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., at the Dayton Convention Center, where ideas and input can be shared and discussed. These key areas will be included:

- * Energy
- * Transportation
- * Sustainable Planning (building codes, etc.)
- * Infrastructure & Design
- * Environmental Protection & Conservation
- * Waste Reduction
- * Green Economy & Market Development
- * Health & Well-being
- * Engaging the Dayton Community

The City's "green team" will incorporate public input received into strategies and action items in a new sustainability plan.

The City of Dayton adopted a Sustainable Practices Policy in 2007 to guide the effort to make the organization and its operations more sustainable. Strategies and action items have been achieved across a number of areas, and the City Commission passed a resolution supporting regional sustainability and the Dayton Regional Green Initiative in 2014.
