Three fixed-site traffic enforcement speed cameras are now in place and ready to be activated.

Two cameras are located at Gettysburg Avenue at Fairbanks Avenue, while another is at North Main Street at Siebenthaler Avenue. Both locations will begin a 30-day warning period on Wednesday, April 11.

A mobile speed trailer has also been placed on North Main Street near Forest Glen Avenue, adding to two mobile cameras already operating in Dayton. It will also be activated on Wednesday, with no warning period.

During the 30-day warning period for the new fixed camera sites, the registered owner of the vehicle caught violating the speed limit will be sent a warning in the mail. After 30 days, citations will be issued by mail and will include payment and appeal directions.

Dayton Police Department data shows injury crashes are down in Dayton about 15 percent from January 1 to April 9, 2018, compared to the same period in 2017. Violations also continue to decrease at current photo enforcement sites. There are fewer violations and, more importantly, motorists are using safer driving practices.

Preparations are underway at two sites (Linden Avenue at Smithville Road and West Third Street at James H. McGee Boulevard), which will eventually have red light enforcement cameras.
