The Dayton Department of Water has received notice of hacker infiltration of a water treatment plant in Florida.

While Dayton monitors the Florida cyber intrusion, local utility professionals continuously review security protocols and work to protect Dayton's water infrastructure, offering reassurance to water customers.

The City of Dayton is a member of the Water Information Sharing and Analysis Center (WaterISAC), a nationwide organization that helps utilities monitor and mitigate current and emerging security threats.

The Department of Water will continue to ensure that its water and wastewater operations systems are secure through security upgrades, employee vigilance, and isolation of operational networks.
