Dayton residents and property owners can now monitor the progress of reported housing issues on a newly launched online portal found at daytonohio.gov/housingtracker.

Housing complaints may be found by entering an address or by clicking on locations displayed on an interactive map.

The tracker displays the nature of the housing issue, the date of the original complaint, the actions taken by City staff and more information. The records displayed on the tracker are drawn from several City of Dayton sources including the Dayton Delivers customer service app and internal databases.

In order to begin a complaint, customers are advised to use the Dayton Delivers app or to call 937-333-4800. Only reported complaints are displayed on the housing tracker.

"We want to make it much easier for neighborhood residents, property owners and others to find the status of reported housing issues," said Todd Kinskey, Director of Planning, Neighborhoods & Development. "The housing tracker pulls together data from a number of sources to make that happen."
