Dayton International Airport (DAY) has registered again for Dayton Regional Green's Bring Your Green Challenge for 2018. Bring Your Green is a friendly, year-long competition for business and government agencies to reduce carbon emissions and costs. Participation in the program is a continuation from the previous year when DAY was recognized with the $10,000 Innovation Award.

"Improving sustainable operations is a priority at the airport," said Terry Slaybaugh, Director of Aviation for the City of Dayton. "Our effects reduce costs and lessen our carbon footprint."

DAY has completed several sustainable initiatives since 2015 in the areas of energy savings, water conservation, waste reduction, and employee engagement.

Dayton Regional Green awards points to competing organizations for activities such as tracking monthly energy, waste, and water bills. Participants earn points and badges as they progress, and the top organizations receive awards and funding. While the overall impact is still being measured, DAY efforts lead the way nationwide for more sustainable airport operations.
